

Best Teams In Ohio State Men's Basketball History: 2011-12

There have been 121 teams in Ohio State men's basketball history, including one national champion squad in 1960.

Ohio State basketball experts Lee Caryer and Tony White, who was a captain of the 1988-89 Buckeyes and works as the basketball analyst for WTVN, helped BSB break down some of the best squads in school history.

When discussing the best teams ever, we emphasized an importance on consistency, tournament success, future NBA players and the competition they faced.

2011-12: 31-8, 13-5 Big Ten. Final Four.

After losing Jon Diebler, Dallas Lauderdale and David Lighty, Ohio State still had a successful season in the 2011-12 campaign. Thad Matta's team beat eight ranked opponents, including six teams who were ranked within the top 10. Also, seven of the squad's eight losses came to ranked opponents.

Despite losing to Michigan State in the Big Ten Tournament final, the Buckeyes regained their momentum in the tournament, defeating Loyola (Md.), Gonzaga, Cincinnati, and No. 2 Syracuse before falling 64-62 to No. 6 Kansas in the Final Four.

Caryer came away from that season less impressed than he was with the previous team, which had a better regular season but caught a tough break in the tourney.

"They were very lucky to get to the Final Four, whereas the '11 team was very unfortunate in not getting to the Final Four," Caryer said. "But if you put an emphasis on late-season heroics than the Final Four is better than the Sweet 16."

White also remembers the 2011-12 Buckeyes catching him by surprise, admiring how they responded to the loss of key pieces in Diebler, Lauderdale and Lighty.

“That’s a team that’s high on the guts factor too,” White said. “That’s a team that people went, ‘What? What are they are doing here? Didn’t they lose all these guys?’ They went to Boston that year and won the regional at Boston, and I remember being at that regional. They were just a gutsy team that figured out how to play basketball, and it came out of nowhere.

“At least with the (Michael) Redd and the Scoonie Penn teams, you had two very consistent, high performers on that team that you went out there and said, ‘OK, we can ride these guys and go a long way.’ And that Ohio State team really didn’t have that level of consistency; they had not really played at that level of consistency all year to be saying, ‘OK, they’re going to the Final Four.’ That kind of came out of nowhere, but it came out of nowhere because they were a gutsy group, and they kind of dug into themselves and figured out how they were going to win that year and get to the Final Four.”

Once making it to the Final Four, the Scarlet and Gray met a talented Kansas team in New Orleans. The Buckeyes carried their tourney momentum into the first half, leading by as many as 13 and holding a 34-25 lead at halftime. With only twenty minutes separating Ohio State and a national championship appearance, the wheels fell off and eventual national runner-up Kansas prevailed.

“They should have been in the national championship game,” White said. “That Final Four game, they had that thing won and they should have been in the national championship game. It was kind of like the guts clock ran out. Because they played so well, and they were that close, and all the sand ran out of the hourglass. And it was over because you can only have so long.

“And it wasn’t a team everybody would look at and say, ‘Boy, I can’t believe they didn’t win the national championship,’ but when you look at how they were playing and where they were in that semifinal game, you go, ‘Boy, I can’t believe they didn’t win the national championship.’ They were right there, I mean, they had the opportunity to win that game. And the way they were playing, if they kept it up for another 40 minutes, they were going to win the championship.”

For four free issues of the now-monthly print edition of Buckeye Sports Bulletin, no card required, sign up at the link here: <http://www.buckeyesports.com/subscribe-4issue-trial/>

[divider line_type="Full Width Line" line_thickness="2" divider_color="default"] [nectar_btn size="jumbo" button_style="regular" button_color_2="Accent-Color" icon_family="none" url="http://www.buckeyesports.com/boards/" text="Join The Conversation"]