

Ohio State Ready For Iowa State Challenge In NCAA Tournament

Ohio State and Iowa State each entered their respective conference tournaments on three-game losing streaks. While the Buckeyes didn't emerge as successfully as did the Cyclones, all that matters now is what's ahead.

That would be a first-round matchup in the NCAA Tournament Midwest Regional at the BOK Center in Tulsa, Okla., on Friday (9:50 p.m. TBS). The winner plays either No. 3-seed Houston (31-3) or No. 14 Georgia State (24-9) on Sunday for the right to advance to the Sweet 16 in Kansas City on March 22.

The Tulsa winner plays the Jacksonville, Fla., winner where No. 7 Wofford (29-4) faces No. 10 Seton Hall (20-13) and No. 2 Kentucky (27-6) goes against No. 15 Abilene Christian (27-6) on Thursday with the second-round game on Saturday.

Iowa State, which won three Big 12 tourney games in a row to become champion, is the sixth-seed with a 23-11 overall mark and a 9-9 record in the conference. The No. 11-seed Buckeyes are 19-14 after an 8-12 record in the Big Ten.

This was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the Buckeyes after a surprising second-round run in the NAAs last season under first-year coach Chris Holtmann. They started this season 12-1 but struggled to finish strong, particularly when they lost those three at the end of the regular season while sophomore center Kaleb Wesson served a suspension.

He returned for a win over Indiana in the first game of the Big Ten tournament. Even though the Buckeyes bowed out the next game to Michigan State, beating the Hoosiers was enough to get a bid.

"All season long, we have been leaning on each other just throughout the struggles," senior guard C.J. Jackson said after the selection show on Sunday. "Obviously, this year has had its ups and downs and just to see our name pop up there is a bit of a sigh of relief."

The Matchup

* Iowa State has four players averaging in double figures, led by fifth-year senior guard Marial Shayok (18.6), a 6-6 transfer from Virginia. He's had at least 17 points in 26 of 33 games. He makes 49.4 percent of his field goals, including 38.9 percent of his three-pointers.

Freshman guard Talen Horton-Tucker, who visited Ohio State last year, averages 12.1 points. Sophomore guard Lindell Wiggington gets 13.5 points and 4.1 rebounds off the bench. Redshirt junior forward Michael Jacobson (6-9, 230) averages 11.5 points and grabs six boards a game. If that's not enough, senior guard Nick Weiler-Babb averages 9.2 points.

* The Cyclones average 77.4 points per game and allow 68.3. The Buckeyes score at a 69.6 clip and allow 66.2.

Jackson said Sunday he didn't know much about the Cyclones but he and Holtmann agreed that the Big 12 overall seems to play at a quicker tempo than the Big 10.

"I know a lot of their teams have good offenses and a lot of good players," Jackson said. "It's different as far as how the defense is played. It feels like the Big Ten might be a little slower at times, the game speed might be slower than the Big 12 might be."

Holtmann described Iowa State as a having a four-guard, spread offense that likes the transition.

* Iowa State mostly plays man-to-man. The Cyclones have held opponents below 70 points 21 times this season and have forced 20-plus turnovers in four games. They have a +1.8 turnover margin, making 11.1 miscues but causing 12.9. OSU commits 12.5 and forces 12.4.

"We know they're a really good team," OSU graduate transfer guard Keyshawn Woods. "They beat Kansas (in Big 12 title game) and a lot of ranked teams, but we're still going to bring our best effort. We're ready to compete against anybody in the country, and we're going to bring that on Friday."

* The Buckeyes to need make Iowa State work defensively. In losing six of eight to end the regular season, the Cyclones allowed nearly 83 points per game in those losses.

Keys For The Buckeyes

Wesson has had two games to shake off any rust and he can be dominant inside vs. the Cyclones. He leads the Buckeyes in points (14.4) and rebounds (6.8) and commits 3.23 fouls per game. Of course, it will all come down to how the game is officiated whether Wesson will make an impact.

Fortunately, the Buckeyes have made stirring comebacks without him recently, such as tying Wisconsin after being down 23 in the second half of the regular season finale and going on a late 16-0 run vs. the Spartans last week.

Unfortunately for OSU, neither resulted in a victory. They're at the point of the season where there are no more moral victories. It's win or go home.

If a freshman or two can make a big contribution there's a good chance OSU will win. Expecting a 29-point virtuoso like Justin Ahrens had in upsetting Iowa 90-70 is asking too much but if he, Duane Washington Jr. or Luther Muhammed can give the Buckeyes some quality minutes, points and energy those players could be the difference.

After all, the NCAA Tournament is where legendary players and moments are made.

[divider line_type="Full Width Line" line_thickness="2" divider_color="default"]nectar_btn
size="jumbo" button_style="regular" button_color_2="Accent-Color" icon_family="none"

url="http://www.buckeyesports.com/boards/" text="Join The Conversation"]