

Tennessee Jeff, Ezekiel Elliott's Father Headline Urban Meyer Supporters At Ohio State Rally

As an Ohio State investigation continues with Urban Meyer on paid administrative leave, between 200-250 people clad in scarlet and gray gathered Monday for a 6 p.m. rally at the north rotunda of Ohio Stadium to show support for the embattled head football coach.

Organized by Jeff Hamms, a 49-year-old fan of the Buckeyes who is also known as “Tennessee Jeff” and lives in Myrtle Beach, S.C., the group stood with signs and chanted cheers for Meyer throughout the course of the brief rally.

While the team was off and checked into its hotel ahead of Tuesday’s practice, which marks the fourth of fall camp, more attention was drawn Monday to OSU’s situation with Meyer and former wide receivers coach Zach Smith.

In the past two weeks, allegations of the since-fired Smith’s past domestic violence have followed the program prior to its 2018 season.

With the recent developments in mind from July 24 at Big Ten Media Days and Aug. 3 between Meyer’s statement and Smith’s interview, in addition to criticism from ESPN’s Paul Finebaum and others, Hamms announced Meyer’s rally Aug. 4 on his Facebook page and drove up to Columbus over the weekend.

After the rally, Hamms explained his motivation for why he went ahead with it.

Jeff Hamms, who organized the rally Monday at Ohio Stadium for head football coach Urban Meyer, speaks as fellow fans look on with signs. (Photo: Garrett Stepien/BSB)

“People say, ‘Why are you wired like this?’ I say ... ‘I swear to God, I don’t care if three or four would have showed up. It doesn’t matter to me.’ My main objective was to show Urban Meyer how much we love and adore that man as not just a 90-percent winning coach but as the coach of Ohio State Buckeye football and the man himself and what he’s done for the university,” Hamms said. “I know Urban Meyer a whole lot better than Paul Finebaum does — I promise you that. So that’s why we’re here, just to support our head football coach and that’s it. That’s the main thing in this whole thing, was to just support Urban Meyer.”

Among those in the crowd, Stacy Elliott, the father of former OSU star running back Ezekiel Elliott, was front and center when the rally winded down.

“This is not the first time Ohio State has looked odd,” Stacy Elliott said. “This is not the first time. Ezekiel Elliott looked odd when he chose Ohio State over Missouri, OK? So if anybody really looks into this and are not haters of Ohio State and haters of Urban Meyer, they will see the actual facts. And all of those that know Urban Meyer need to stand up and be men and speak and defend what is right.”

Ezekiel Elliott signed with Ohio State from St. Louis John Burroughs as a four-star prospect in the 2013 recruiting class. Ezekiel Elliott played for Meyer from 2013-15 before he went at fourth overall in the first round of the 2016 NFL Draft to the Dallas Cowboys.

Stacy Elliott, who is the father of former Ohio State star running back Ezekiel Elliott, addresses the media Monday at Ohio Stadium after fans rallied to support head football coach Urban Meyer. (Photo: Garrett Stepien/BSB)

After a breakout rookie season in 2016, Ezekiel Elliott served a six-game suspension in 2017 after his ex-girlfriend accused him of domestic violence in July 2016. Stacy Elliott alluded to his son’s situation when he acknowledged the criticism against Meyer.

“There are a lot of people who come out of the woodwork and try to accuse you of things you didn’t do,”

Stacy Elliott said. “But I say that from a position of not giving anybody a free pass for abusing women. But this is the reality — the Elliotts, my family, we’re living this. People come out of the woodwork when you’re in the spotlight and they make up accusations. When you’re a just man, you have to ride it out and figure out what is right and what is wrong, but (Meyer) followed the rules of The Ohio State University.”

Asked about his thoughts on how outsiders might view Ohio State after the rally, Hamms defended his decision to support Meyer.

“I don’t care,” Hamms said. “Not to disrespect any of that. Here’s what I care about. I care about this. I care about the victim. I can’t even answer the question because when I say, ‘I don’t care,’ I’m ignorant to it. When I say, ‘I don’t care,’ let me explain that. I don’t care about our ex-wide receiver coach and his domestic situation. He’s no longer with this program. He’s gone. I care about one man right now and that’s our coach, Urban Meyer. Why he’s not over there (at the Woody Hayes Athletic Center) tomorrow morning, I’ll never know. But when I say, ‘I don’t care,’ don’t take that out of context. I don’t care about that whole situation and what happened with head coach Urban Meyer and how he should be over there coaching our football team. That’s what I care about.”

Stacy Elliott echoed those sentiments, adding how he hopes to speak with Meyer and tell him of his support.

“I would never — and I know Urban Meyer would never — condone a woman being abused, so those who abuse women need to stop right now,” Stacy Elliott said. “But the truth of the matter, based on what we all know, he handled the situation according to how his job required him to. So to hold him in this situation where he’s got to deal with his emotions, not being with his boys and representing this university with the utmost integrity is wrong.

“You’re damn right I’m going to call him. I’m calling him right now. Don’t worry, coach. God is with you.”

More on the story

- OSU Opening Tuesday Practice To Media
- Meyer Investigation To Be Completed Within 14 Days
- Former OSU WR Coach Zach Smith Says AD Gene Smith Knew Of Allegations
- Meyer releases statement, explains actions
- Zach Smith CPO Hearing Postponed To September
- OSU Practice Closed To Media Amid Investigation
- For Now, Ryan Day Is Ohio State’s Head Coach
- Meyer Placed On Paid Administrative Leave
- REPORT: Meyer’s Wife Knew Of 2015 Allegations Against Smith
- Ohio State Names Brian Hartline Interim WR Coach
- Ohio State Fires Zach Smith

[divider line_type="Full Width Line" line_thickness="2" divider_color="default"][nectar_btn size="jumbo" button_style="regular" button_color_2="Accent-Color" icon_family="none" url="http://www.buckeyesports.com/boards/" text="Join The Conversation"\]](http://www.buckeyesports.com/boards/)